AUBURN
UNIVERSITY

Auburn University's Anti-Bullying Summit is innovative and informative. It is obvious the key-note speakers and presenters are experts on this topic and eager to share their knowledge. The PLU activities are the most realistic that I have participated in. My Faculty, Staff, Students, and Community continue to benefit from this Summit –it is truly the most inspiring, informative, and practical Conference that I have attended.

Felicia Simpson, Community Education Coordinator, Gadsden City Schools, Gadsden, Alabama

About the Anti-Bullying Summit

Mission

To facilitate action-oriented conversations via a premiere conference designed to share information, current thinking, and research about a serious problem facing our schools and communities—bullying. The conference is designed to create on-going local, state, and national coalitions for Pre K -12 educators, higher education faculty and administrators, student leaders, mental health practitioners, researchers, community leaders, policymakers, and other professionals who are engaged in on-going work to address Pre K-20 bullying and cyber-bullying in learning environments.

Attending the Anti-Bullying Summit inspired me even more to stand-up and help others realize that bullying is a HUGE problem and needs to be addressed. What I learned at the Summit has helped me drive the message home that each and every school can do something to combat BULLYING.

Objectives

- To engage in cross-role and role-alike deliberations about best practices to address issues related to bullying and cyber-bullying
- To form coalitions able to address the many issues related to bullying and cyber-bullying.
- To promote on-going and new research efforts regarding pK-20 policy reform, curriculum development, intervention/prevention strategies, and potential legislation related to bullying and cyber-bullying.
- To provide quality CEU/PLU learning opportunities for teachers, administrators, counselors, and others.

Regardless of the way a school or institution incorporates anti-bullying strategies, the willingness to engage in honest dialogue, the quantity and quality of ideas generously shared, and the belief that we all want the best for our children and our communities makes this one of the very best conferences I've attended!!
